Army surgeons during the late war found chronic diarrhom one of the most obstinate diseases they had to treat. Thousands of cases proved fatal, and many soldiers suffering with the disease were pronounced incurable, and discharged from the service. Chamberlain's colle, cholera and diarrhom remedy was not known at that time. It has proved to be one of the grandest discoveries ever made in the history of medical practice. It has been used all over the west for years, and many chronic cases cured after being treated by the most eminent physicians, and at an enormous expense. It is pleasant and safe, and never fails. LINCOLN'S NOMINATION.

A CHESS PLAYER'S QUICK PERCEP-TION TURNED THE SCALE.

An Incident of the Republican National Convention of 1860-Decisive Action at a Critical Moment-A Chess Player's

H. K. Enos, who was the close personal friend and principal broker of William H. Vanderbilt, is one of the quiet men of the Stock Exchange. In the old days, when bent on executing some of the big deals of his mighty millionaire friend, he was, as he is now, unobtrusive and never posing. He is a good deal prouder of the part his father, the modest banker of an Ohio village, played in politics than he is of the prominence and the ducats that he has won in Wall street.

The elder Enos was a Whig of the old school, and a little in advance of his party, always carnest and aggressive, sympathizing even with the Abolitionist apostles. He lived at Millersburg, and twenty-five or thirty years ago was widely known all over what was then known as the west as an accountant of rare abilities and a chess player whom nobody could beat. The preliminary canvass of 1850 made him a delegate to the Republican National convention to nominate a presi-dential candidate. He believed in Chase; anybody to beat Seward was satisfactory to him. Then came his capacity as an accoun ant into play, and the powers of memory, grouping and combination that the ches-board cultivates, were then of rare use. He easily kept ahead of the convention's clerks in the tallying of votes and the relation of each addition to the result.

A CRITICAL MOMENT. Ghio had been called, though the vote was not yet announced, when he suddenly leaped not yet announced, when he suddenly leaped to his feet and whispered among his col-leagues that Lincoln lacked only two and a half votes of having the nomination. The others could scarce believe it, when he urged upon his friend R. M. Corwin, son of the famous statesman Tom Cerwin, to change their votes to make Lincoln the nominee. Corwin quickly acceded, and so did two others of the delegation, all joining in a re-quest to David K. Cartter, the Ohio chairman, to hurry in the announcement of the changed votes before the clerks should read the result. The clerks were still busy adding up figures when Chairman Cartter, himself scarcely realizing the import of his message, announced that four of his men were desirous of having their votes put down to Abraham Lincoln.

Then the four Ohio designtes began a jubi-ce. Their shouts shook the building. Hurrabs for Lincoln swept over the assemblage. Banker Robert Enos, with his quick eye of a chess player and sharp knack of casting up totals, had caught the convention napping. Lincoln was nominated.

Mr. H. K. Enos treasures as one of his choicest possessions the badge that his father were at the Chicago convention, and in his scrap book is a worn old slip of paper, a Votes," says this:

HOW IT WAS DONE. "During the progress of the third ballot for president the stendy increase of Lincoln's vote raised the expectations of his friends to pleted a hear ooting discovered that Lin-con lacked but 2)4 ones of election, the bal-lot standing: For Lacoln, 231/4; Seward, 190; enttering, 34/4; necessary for a choice, 234. Before the vote was an ...ounced Mr. R. M. Corwin, of the Ohio delegation, who had voted for Governor Chass up to that time, and three other delegates—R. K. Enes, John A. Curley and Isnac Steese—changed their votes to Lincoln, giving him a majority of the whole convention and nominating him. D. K. Cartter, chairman of the delegation, announced the change of votes, and before the secretary had time to foot up and anforth simultaneously into irrepressible shouts. A deafening roar of applause arose from the equaled on the American continent nor since the walls of Jericho were blown down."

Chairman Cartter, of the Ohio delegation, who is mentioned, was Chief Justice David K. Cartter, of the supreme court of the Dis-trict of Columbia, who died recently in Washington, in his 75th year. Mr. Enos enjoyed Mr. Lincoln's friendship, but he never accepted an office. He died three years ago. —New York Times.

A Defender of "Lonnon."

Like the fellow history tells of, I was born tired. Putting it brutally, I am lazy. I never will work unless I have to, and if there is the slightest excuse for putting it off till to-morrow, you may bet your last pair of boots I will not do it to-day. Now I have been waiting for the last three months in London until there would be nothing going on in that village, and then I would settle down and get to work. Yet every day a new pines. The other day I got talking to an old Isberman in the old town of old Hastings. It rather puzzled him to think that a fellow
